Greetings From the Stake Presidency

To our many friends, old and new, returning to their former home on this the first Home Coming occasion in Wasatch County, we bid you thrice welcome to this beautiful valley, a place which has well been christened "The Valley of Peace"

This may well be considered the most beautiful valley in all the world, situated like a well arranged nest in the "valleys of the mountains", surrounded on all sides with the green of nature, and extending high up on the sides of Mount Timpanogas with its everlasting cap of white, visible from almost every home in the valley.

We would remind you of the pure air tempered to suit the wishes of all, both day and night, and trust that you will once more enjoy its invigorating effects.

Drink freely of the pure, cool water which is on tap in nearly every home in the county.

All the good things we have mentioned, and many more, together with a most hearty welcome are free to all.

We trust that you will enjoy yourselves and have a time long to be remembered, and that you will pass along a good word for this splendid valley, the good people who have resided here in the past and for those who still remain.

The Wasatch Stake Presidency—

Joseph R. Murdock, President,
David A. Broadbent, 1st Counselor,
G. Frank Ryan, 2nd Counselor,
Chas. N. Broadbent, Clerk.

Prosperity on Partial Payments

Do you know that every man can buy PROSPERITY by partial payments as easily as he can buy a piano, a car, a sewing machine or a home?

Start a Savings Account in this Bank TODAY with say $3; add an equal amount each week and stick to it.

In 5 years this investment will equal $864.14

In 10 years you have $1918.92. Other amounts in proportion.

Those who live up all their income court disaster. Let us defer some of the pleasures of the passing moment—forget about spending it and in a few years it will mean a home a farm, a business.

If we don't—look out. It is old age, rheumatism and a pick and shovel.

We Are Here To Serve "U"

Greetings

To the thousands of our former residents and to the stranger and visitor who are our guests on this occasion, we wish to say that you are welcome. Of all the many things of which Wasatch County can be proud, none stand out so prominently as her stalwart citizens, both those who are now living within her borders and those who have had occasion to remove therefrom. These citizens, together with numerous friends and visitors have now come back to their old home to renew friendships and again enjoy the pleasures of former times. Therefore we, the officers of your fair county welcome you, old and young friend and stranger and assure you that the latch string to every legitimate pleasure hangs out.

It will soon be seventy years since the first pioneers established settlements in Wasatch County. Few, if any, of those pioneers now survive, but the good work that they began has been carried on by their posterity and the thousands of other persons who have followed the course they mapped out, until now we have one of the wealthiest and most prosperous commonwealths in the State of Utah. To visitors, former residents and residents, we officially open the door of hospitality and invite you to come and enjoy yourselves.

Cordially Yours,

John M. Ritchie,
J. Parley Edwards,
John A. Fortie,

Board of County Commissioners.

Wasatch County

An Historical Sketch

by
Edwin D. Hatch.

The people of Wasatch County have just reason to be proud of the place held by the county in the State of Utah. It is one of the older communities of the West, with a history extending into the dim past, beginning with the exploring expedition of A. D. 1776 led by the Roman Catholic Father, Escalante, who, while the American War for Independence was being waged along the Atlantic shores, was delving into the barren and unknown West. The party of Father Escalante passed up the north branch of the Uintah River, later and now called the Provo, and followed the Provo River to the shores of Utah Lake in August of that year, camped on the shores of Utah Lake for some two or three weeks, and then departed for their home in Santa Fe, following a southern route.

Except, perhaps, for a few adventurous trappers, the foot of no white man again trod the soil of Wasatch County until in the summer of the year 1857, when a party of "Mormons", seeking a range for their cattle and, perhaps, a location for a future settlement, spent some time in the Provo Valley.

In the summer of 1858 there came into the Provo Valley a band of sturdy, God-fearing, industrious "Mormons." Theirs was not a visitation made in the hope of gaining sudden and vast wealth, but with the determination of building homes, raising farm crops and cattle, subduing the elements to their will and the establishment of permanent, orderly and loyal American communities. How well they succeeded needs no description. The first year these hardy settlers garnered more than one thousand bushels of grain. Among these men were James Davis, William Davidson, Robert Broadhead, Thomas Rasband, John Crook, Jesse Bond, John Jordan, James and John Carlile, Henry Chatwin, Charles M. Carrol, William Giles and John Lee. Like all "Mormon" colonists and settlers they were organized, with Wm. M. Wall as Presiding Elder and James Laird and John M. Murdock as his counselors.

The following years brought more settlers of the same faith to the valley, until in the year 1860 a considerable number of people were settled in log houses suitable to withstand the cold of the winters, and who had provided for themselves a log school house and a church for their education and worship. In this year Joseph S. Murdock was made Bishop and a ward organization effected, under the direction of President Brigham Young.

The early years of the settlement of the valley were filled with the extreme hardships for the settlers that were experienced by like communities of the West. The Indians were a constant source of fear and anxiety, until under the direction of President Brigham Young and in accord with his doctrine that "it is better to feed than to fight them" a gift of many cattle was made to the Indians and a treaty of peace entered into. Following this treaty some few raids were made by the natives in which some live stock was lost, but no very serious outbreak occurred, and no lives were lost by the settlers by fighting with the Indians.

In the year 1862 the Territory of Nevada was created out of the western part of the Territory of Utah. This made necessary the re-dividing of Utah into counties, and seventeen new counties were created within the Territory by legislative enactment, and among these was the County of Wasatch.

This action gave to the residents of Wasatch County the opportunity to effect their first county organization. Bishop Joseph S. Murdock was made the first representative of the county in the Territorial Legislature. Three Selectmen, corresponding to our present County Commissioners, in the persons of Thomas Todd, James Duke and John H. VanWagoner were named and the County Court was organized with John W. Witt as Judge. The first Sheriff was S. N. Johnson and the first Treasurer, John M. Murdock.

By the year 1877 the population of the county had increased until it was determined by President Young to organize the people into a Stake of Zion. Wasatch Stake came into being with Abram Hatch as President, with Henry S. Alexander and Thomas H. Giles as Counselors, President Hatch having succeeded Bishop Murdock in the year 1867 as Bishop. Under the able guidance of these men the people of the county prospered greatly. With the opening of the mines at Park City a ready and accessible market was afforded for the produce of the valley, and as a result new and better homes with corresponding improvement in conditions of life were enjoyed by the people of the county.

President Hatch continued to preside in the Stake until the year 1901. During this period the various towns were surveyed; title to the lands perfected; many irrigation canals and ditches constructed and the waters of the Provo River and its tributaries brought to the lands; the County Court House and the commodious and substantial Stake Tabernacle, then called the Stake House, erected; roomy and substantial school houses were erected in each community of the county; trees were planted and orchards set out; and the railroad brought as far in the county as Heber City, affording the people shipping facilities long hoped for and giving them access to the markets of the world for their products; telephone lines to Salt Lake City were established, etc.

Abram Hatch was succeeded in the Stake Presidency in 1901 by Wm. H. Smart, who chose as his counselors James C. Jensen and Joseph R. Murdock. Under their direction the present Bank of Heber City was organized with an initial capital of $25,000.00. This had been a long felt need of the county, and its growth from a bank of the original to its present capitalization of $100,000.00 by successive increases from its organization in 1902 to the present year is representative of the growth of finance, wealth and productivity of the county over that period. Under President Smart the people completed some old and several new irrigation projects, a stock company was formed and the established mercantile business of Mark Jeffs was taken over, the new business being the present Heber Mercantile Company. Old wards were reorganized and new wards created. The Indian Reservation forming much of the county was surveyed anticipating its opening for settlement.

In the year 1906 Wm. H. Smart was succeeded by our present beloved President Joseph R. Murdock, with James C. Jensen and Edward D. Clyde as counselors. The Indian Reservation was opened to settlers in 1905 and many of the former residents of the valley removed to that part of the county, where also settled many people from other parts of Utah and from other states of the Union. The growth of this part of the county and its settlement was very rapid. By the year 1914 the eastern part of the county contained nearly as many residents as did the older western portion. The physical conformation of the country, with the high mountain range lying between the new and the old parts, made it very difficult for the new settlers to reach the county seat during many months of the year. This and other desirable objects rendered it imperative that a new county be created. This was done in 1915 and the new county of Duchesne, comprising approximately four fifths of the old Wasatch County came into being.

President Joseph R. Murdock is the first native son of Utah to preside over Wasatch Stake of Zion; born at Salt Lake City, August 11, 1858. His whole life and effort has been for the upbuilding and progress of Wasatch Stake and Wasatch County. His penchant has been finance and irrigation. Of these two activities irrigation is his first and best love. From his boyhood he has loved to work with water and observe its life-giving effect upon barren lands. Perhaps the outstanding achievement of his career as it affects Wasatch County, is his foresight in recognizing that the waters of Provo River and its tributaries were not being put to their greatest beneficial use, and his formation of the Provo Reservoir Company, turning upon the excess waters of the Provo River and diverting them to former unproductive lands in Utah and Salt Lake Counties. Perhaps the greatest future in the history of the county was created by this move by our President. Much adverse comment and determined opposition was encountered by the President and determined opposition was encountered by the President ident, and when his company instituted a suit at law to adjudicate the rights of all the users of the waters of the Provo River System this excitement reached its height. Never has the county been so stirred. The President was assailed on all sides. This suit and its trial covered several years. As it progressed some saw the great vision of Joseph R. Murdock, but others failed to do so. Today the suit is at an end and thousands of acres of land, formerly unproductive, have been added to the State; water rights which formerly rested upon a more or less insecure basis now are fixed by judicial decree, and the rights of all users of water of our river are safeguarded beyond question. And the irrigation companies and individual water users of Wasatch County have the best and most secure water rights in the State of Utah. The vision of the President has been justified and fulfilled.

Today President Murdock is ably assisted in his arduous labors by his counselors, David A. Broadbent and G. Frank Ryan.

From its first settlement to the present, Wasatch County has had men of vision combined with the ability for hard, consistent and successful work as its ecclesiastical leaders and the civil officers have been honest and far-sighted, combining to build a community of which any state or nation may well be proud.

Though the earliest discovery of precious metals in the Park City District was made in Wasatch County, until quite recently no mines of any consequence had been developed therein. Today it contains one of the great silver-lead mines of the world, a history and description of which will be found elsewhere in this booklet.

Wasatch County furnished its quota of soldiers for both the Spanish-American War and for the World War. Many veterans of the latter are residents here and some few of our sons made the great sacrifice in France.

The present official family of the county is as follows:

State Senator, Hon. G. Frank Ryan of Heber City;
Representative to State Legislature, Hon. Frederick Crook of Heber City;
Judge of District Court, Hon. Elias Hansen, Provo, Utah.
District Attorney, Hon. M. B. Pope, Provo, Utah;

wealthy communities of the State. It is served with a daily combination railroad train over the Denver and Rio Grande tracks from Provo, Utah; a branch line of the Union Pacific Railroad from Park City to Keetley; daily auto stage lines to and from Salt Lake City via Provo, to Park City and to Duchesne County points. It boasts a school system second to none in like communities; large and substantial churches; good roads; large department stores and many smaller stores coal yards, lumber yards; flouring mills; saw mills; vast herds of sheep and cattle; thousands of acres of farm and pasture lands; large and valuable crops of wheat, oats, peas, sugar beets, vegetables of all sorts; apple orchards; honey; hay of various kinds; two cheese factories, producing prize-winning cheese wherever shown; the "Wasatch Wave", the best weekly newspaper in the West and printer of this booklet; a growing dairy industry; a large and growing pea-canning plant; a great railroad division point; the finest ranges in the United States, producing the best grades of beef and mutton; one of the great mines of silver-lead ores in the West; vast forests; Provo River—the choicest trout stream in Utah; the towering and majestic Mount Timpanogas, rearing its perpetually snow-clad head into the clouds; the famous and unique Hot Pots; municipally owned electric power plant and lines supplying nearly every city, town and settlement in the Provo Valley; one city of the third class and five incorporated towns; an abundant and pure water supply; deep canyons and pleasant valleys inhabited by a clean, intelligent, law abiding citizenship who appreciate the heritage they have and who are determined to "carry on"; and a Wasatch Chamber of Commerce, composed of citizens of every town in the county, ready and willing to furnish any information to inquirers concerning the resources of the county.

Briefly the history of Wasatch County is the story of the successful struggle of a noble people, pitted against overwhelming odds to conquer the wilderness and redeem the desert places and bring them to a high state of fertility and production. The activities of its founders and of its present citizenship have been and are largely devoted to the raising of livestock and farm products. The quality of these is equalled in few communities and excelled in none. Great deposits of coal iron ores, and precious metals; vast forests, numerous hydroelectric power sites and other natural resources have hardly been touched and the possibilities in developing these are unlimited. Truck gardening and dairying are in their infancy with a great future now in sight.

Pursuit of a wise and conservative public policy with a welcoming attitude toward new industries, assure a future development of Wasatch County in keeping with the great progress of the past.

History of the Park Utah Mine

By P. H. Hunt

What is thought to be the first discovery of ore in the Park City District was made in 1870 in about the middle portion of what is now known as McHenry canyon. This discovery consisted of an outcropping of high grade silver ore carrying some lead zinc and copper lying on a hard quartzite foot-wall, later and further to the eastward more of the same type of ore was found and explored in an adit, now caved, the portal of which is about 150 ft. south-east of the Hawkeye shaft. The discovery of this ore attracted other prospectors, which led to the Ontario discovery about a year later, and from that to the discovery of all the other great mines of the district, which to date have added somewhere between two hundred and two hundred and fifty million dollars to the wealth of the state and nation.

The record of the exploration of the ore found in McHenry canyon is a record of the courage of the pioneers in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties. The ore was high grade but occurred in a great fault zone which had shattered and broken the continuity of the vein so that only streaks and bunches were left; this fault zone was a channel for large flows of water, which developed great pressure as depth was reached. The mines were situated in a narrow canyon subject to snow slides in winter and freshets in the spring. Fuel for the boiler consisted of timber cut from the mountain sides or coal hauled from Coalville by ox teams. In spite of all these difficulties several attempts were made from the time of its discovery until 1901, to explore and put upon a profitable basis some of these discoveries. Meanwhile the Ontario, Daly, Anchor, Judge, Daly West and Silver King mines had been finding great ore bodies beginning with the easternmost, the Ontario, and developing westward.

It was small wonder that the earliest discoveries in the eastern part of the district with their attendant failures and the success that had been gained to the westward should not have impressed mining investors. One person, however who had long been identified with Park City mining, Mr. George W. Lambourne, was undismayed and had long been working to amalgamate groups of claims that would cover what he believed was the continuance of the Park City ore zone. Another successful Park City mining man, Mr. George D. Blood, had long considered the great Frog Valley overthrust, which lies partly in Summit and partly in Wasatch counties was a promising area for exploration. These two gentlemen combined their forces in 1916 and in 1917 work was begun through the lower Ontario-Daly drain tunnel. This work consisted of a crosscut southward to explore the Hawkeye-McHenry fissure system, and a drift northward in the Frog Valley fault zone. The north crosscut has never been continuously advanced but work in the Hawkeye-McHenry country was so encouraging that all efforts have been concentrated there. Numerous mineral bearing veins have been found, two of which have yielded substantial quantities of profitable ore. To January 1, 1924 100000 tons of ore had been shipped, carrying about four and one half million ounces of silver and ten thousand ounces of gold, as a result stockholders have received about one and a half million dollars in dividends on an investment of one million dollars. Large bodies of profitable milling ore have been left and the management feels that less than one tenth of the territory in the McHenry-Hawkeye area has been prospected.

The Park Utah mine has meant much to Wasatch County, besides increasing the property valuation it has been the attraction that induced the Union Pacific to first enter the county with a branch line about six miles from Richardson Flat northeast from Park City over the summit and to the portal of the Ontario-Daly drain tunnel. Sixty per cent of its employees are young men living in Heber and Midway, which means from $20,000 to $30,000 per month earned by men who have their homes in this county. The friendliest relations exist between the agricultural and stock raising interests and the mining interests, which augurs well for the future, as it is the firm belief of the writer that Wasatch County has a great mining future.

The community that is slowly growing up about the mine is not an alien blot on the county map given over to bootlegging, gambling, fighting and engaged in a dangerous, unhygienic occupation; but is a decent, orderly and healthful community, among the best of such that can be found in the state.

 —“OUR WASATCH”—
 (Synopsis)

Our Pioneers from the Eastern Land came out West—
 Some located near the Great Salt Lake, While others in their Quest found our beautiful valley (A Hidden Rest)
 high in the Wasatch Mountains. Yes, Hidden from View, Where no one knew, save the Red Men and the Angels who guarded it, At God's command to save it for His people.

Our Pioneers come and are surprised at its beauty,
 and are encouraged by the Spirit of Wasatch, who welcomes them and bids them Plow and Sow, yes, Reap and Mow, and see God's beautiful Garden grow, In this the Provo Valley

Oh! Lighten the Frost and Lessen the Snow,
 Behold the Flowers of Wasatch Grow;
 While the Red man watches with envious eye,
 And says, “The cattle and sheep shall die,
 Discord and Contention have uged us on,
 Until we feel a terrible wrong
 Has been done us.”

Bravery and Courage come to the rescue and help both the Saints and the Red men. Peace smiles in the valley and All is Well.

Wasatch bids Labor and Industry—interrupted by Indian Warfare—resume their task, while Progress steadily travels on to pave the way for Education and Art to build a monument to the Pioneers, its height to reach the Heavens. Their Labor and their Glory shall never be forgotten. Only one object in view; Only one goal in sight—A Bigger and Better Wasatch.
